Cameron Wins Award In Governor's Contest

The city of Cameron had a winning entry in the Governor's Community Achievement Award contest for 1974, according to an announcement by Barbara Smitherman, Chamber of Commerce manager.

The city's entry was selected from among those towns with population of between 5,000 and 10,000, Mrs. Smitherman said.

The award deals with the development and beautification of the community for a one-year period. Cameron's award is for the year 1974.

The award will be presented in person by Governor Dolph Briscoe at ceremonies during a meeting at Fort Worth in June.

The award will consist of a plaque which will be placed on the downtown mall. Mrs. Smitherman said.

A town meeting will be held shortly to select a delegation of citizens who will go to Fort Worth to accept the award.

Mrs. Smithrman said Cameron's entry consisted of a narrative paper submitted in writing of what had been done or planned for the improvement of the community during 1974.

Anarchy? 'Nein'....

West German anarchists went too far Thursday in storming the West German embassy at Stockholm and six surrendered to authorities even though they held a dozen hostages.

The attack in Sweden was so bizarre the Bonn government called in leaders of the four main West German political parties and Chancellor Helmut Schmidt in Bonn.

A hardline decision went down. The anarchsts, implicated or known to have committed about 30 murders in Germany, failed to get a half-million dollars ransom and freedom for 26 of their number held prisoner in West Germany.

One anarchist committed suicide and the others were captured by Swedish police.

It was reversal of policy dealing with political prisoners in West Germany. The anarchists, which included two women, bombed and stormed the West German embassy in Stockholm and threatened to kill a hostage every hour until their friends in west German custody were flown out to freedom with a half-million ransom.

There was a shootout. The military attache was killed by machine gun fire. But the hostages were not killed as the terrorists said they would be.

Earlier, Bonn policy had been to pay ransom or release anarchist prisoners rather than risk lives of potential victims like West German mayoral candidate Peter Lorenz. Lorenz was taken prisoner by terrorists, but released when the Bonn government released six anarchists to Yemen with ransom money.

All this proves that people won't put up with anarchy forever, particularly when it begins, in effect, an invasion of the official residence of government embassies.

It failed in West Germany. It won't work much longer anywhere else.

Let Tennis Grow

We encourage the growth of Town & Country Tennis Association, organizing for development of the game here, improvement of facilities and encouraging competitive tennis.

Tennis is of age. Cameron, like so many towns and cities throughout the country, has never seen so many players of all ages. And it has never seen less adequate facilities for school players, let alone for the rest of the community.

If popularity is what impresses about the importance of space and money for athletic facilities, let this tennis association join the obvious numbers in Cameron Public Schools competing for CISD and wanting more places to develop and play the game.

It is a game people can play all their lives.

State Budget Needs Cut To Finance School Reform

AUSTIN

Gov. Dolph Briscoe and leaders in both houses of the legislature should use their influence to cut about $500 million from the state budget in order to free up that sum for public school finance, Rep. Dan Kubiak of Rockdale said Thursday.

Kubiak said proposed increases in state agency spending, coupled with Briscoe's pledge to veto any tax measure, have restricted funds available for school finance reform to around $500 million. At least twice that amount is needed, he said.

"There is presently insufficient money for both school finance equalization and a decent teacher pay raise," Kubiak said. "Unless we get strong leadership in trimming the budget, we will end up doing a mediocre and at best patchwork job at both."

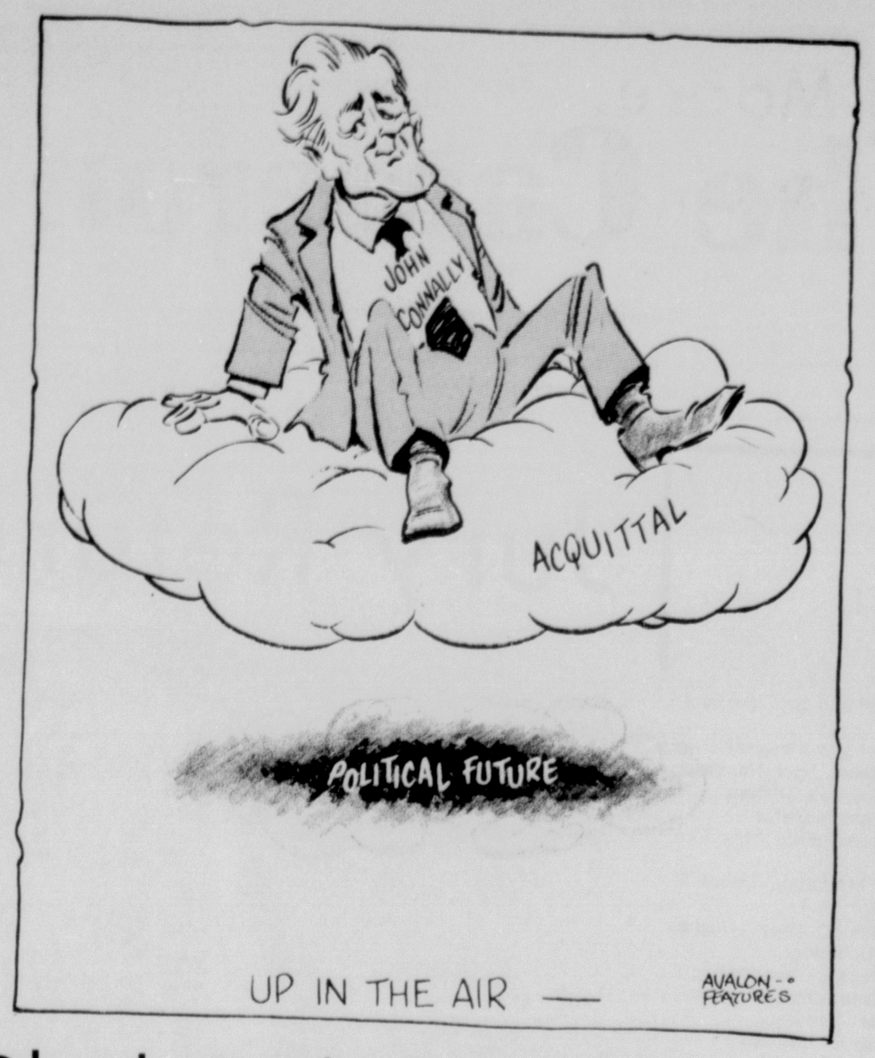
Proposed spending increases in higher education, correctional programs, administrative spending and other budget areas could be reduced or postponed, Kubiak said, to provide more money for education reform.

"I am not saying these areas do not need additional money, but if school finance is our top priority, we need to start treating it that way," Kubiak said. "Whatever education bill we pass, we need more leadership in cutting approximately $500 million from other budget requests."

Liberals and conservatives alike should unite behind the effort to reduce general appropriations by a sufficient amount to pay for public school equity, Kubiak said.

"The increases spending and desirable goals in Legislative Budget Board recommendations could be deferred--painful as that might be--until 1977, when the Governor is not bound by a pledge of no new taxes," Kubiak said.

Kubiak, former chairman of the House Education Committee, is sponsor of one of the school finance reform measures before the House.



'Black Sash' Fights For Native African Rights

JOHANNESBURG

Reuter--"If you were the slave of a system you had not created, if you had to be arbitrarily selected at a human cattle market in order to enjoy the privilege of working and earning some kind of a livelihood, wouldn't you care?"

The Black Sash, which thus catalouges the effects of South Africa's migrant labor system, has been fighting for the past two decades to make the apartheid republic's ruling white minority care about the fate of its black fellow countrymen.

Celebrating its 20th birthday this year, the Sash has proved the most durable of political ginger groups in a land where the authorities have shown little compunction about crushing their political opponents.

Its survival seems due to the fact that it is a women's organization, whose 1,100 members are drawn overwhelmingly from the upper strata of white society.

"We are protected to some extend because we're a women's organization," says black Sash President Sheena Duncan, "But we can also be ridiculed on this basis. It is protection in a very male dominated society, and it is advantageous in some ways that we're not taken too seriously."

The Sash began in 1955 as a gut political protest movement, organizing petitions, vigils and marches against the government's plan to alter an entrenched clause of the constitution and take colored (mixed race) people off the common voter's roll.

Members today fondly remember the time when they could get 100,000 signatures on a petition within days and organize mass protest convoys to parliament in Cape Town.

They also "haunted" minister--standing silently in ranks, wearing the black sashes which gave them their name, when a cabinet member made a public appearance. One minister was reputed to have scaled an airport wall to avoid the accusing silence.

But when the government pushed the legislation through anyway, Sash support shrunk and the organization gradually began to assume a new and more practical role, attempting to counter the destructive social effects of the political system.

In particular, its name has become synonymous with bitter criticism of the country's pass law--the extremely complex regulations which govern and restrict the freedom of the black man's movement in the white areas of the country.

Advice offices established in major centers since 1958 have heldped thousands of blacks whose passes were supposedly not in order and had been summarily told to leave the white cities and return to their rural homelands.

By exposing bureaucratic bungling, the offices have shown that many of these people in fact had a legal right to remain in the cities--and their investigations have frequently prevented the break-up of black families.

In the Sash's last statistical year, 5,225 Africans sought aid from the Johannesburg office alone, and at least 22 percent of the cases were satisfactorily solved.

"Our success is due entirely to the fact that we know how to insist on someone's rights being recognized," Says Mrs. Duncan.

This success may seem small when it is considered that a staggering total of more than 10 million Africans were prosecuted for pass laws offenses from 1948 to 1973--the first 25 years of government by the ruling National Party.

But the sense of security and human dignity the organization has given to many of its black advice seekers cannot be measured in statistical terms.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

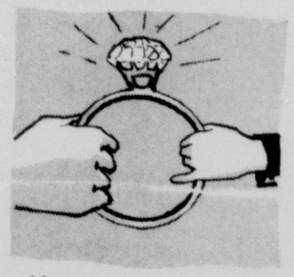
When Engagement is Broken

Getting engaged came easy for Gwen and Andy. But getting married seemed so scary that they finally decided to call the whole thing off.

At that point, however, a new problem arose: which one was entitled to keep the engagement ring? When Gwen refused to give it back, Andy hauled her into court.

After due deliberation, the court ruled in Andy's favor.

"An engagement ring is a symbol of the coming marriage," said the court. "If the engagement is broken off, the ring should be returned. The gift was conditional and the condition was not fulfilled."



Most courts agree that the engagement ring is returnable--at least, unless the man was solely to blame for the breakup. Returnable also are other gifts exchanged between the two parties in contemplation of marriage.

But this does not extend to gifts given prior to the engagement--that is, gifts given during the period of courting.

Thus, a court rejected the effort of an elderly suitor to reclaim some jewelry he had given to a younger woman. The court said the gifts had been made at his own risk, on the chance this his courtship would succeed.

What about gifts from friends and relatives, when the marriage plans fall through? Consider this case:

A doting father was so delighted when his daughter became engaged that he set up a $5,000 joint bank account for the betrothed couple. Soon afterward, the romance cooled. But the young man retained his affection for the $5,000.

"That was an outright gift," he argued in a court test. "Her father didn't say we had to get married."

But the court decided that even if the father didn't say it, he clearly meant it. The court said he would scarcely have set up a joint bank account except on the assumption that the two would soon be husband and wife.

Uneasy Peace Seen In Laos

VIENTIANE

Reuter-- Every day, as wars rage in Cambodia and South Vietnam, it becomes clearer that the uneasy peace in Laos still makes that country the calmest of the former French Indochinese territories.

The peace agreement signed between the two warring parties in Laos two years ago is slowly but surely being consolidated, although many problems remain to be overcome.

An uneasy--but so far lasting--peace came to Laos when a ceasefire was signed two years ago to try to implement an overall policy for the future of this landlocked, mountanous kingdon, torn by two decades of strife between leftists, rightists, and centrists.

A year later came the formation of the joint provisional government for national union, consisting of the pro-communist Pathet Lao, represented by Prince Souphanouvong, and the right-wing Vientiane side under his half-brother, Prime Minister Prince Souvanna Phouma.

On April 5, in a statement marking the government's first anniversary, both leaders referred to the chaos in Cambodia and South Vietnam.

The two princes said the two wars continued to sadden Indochina, where as "the political wisdom of the different Laotian parties had contributed to keeping away from te people of the kingdom of a million elephants the sad spectacle of death and desolation which is the daily lot of the people in South Vietnam and Cambodia."

But consolidation of the peace has proved difficult, and it is still impossible to predict the end of this strange calm.

Despite the 1973 ceasefire accord there have been military clashes between the Pathet Lao and the Vientiane said, particularly in the north. The two sides still distrust each other, and this is hampering the work of the government and the mixed commission for implementing the ceasefire.

The leaders of the two sides continue to proclaim the need to forget past quarrels, but in practice they add fuel to the flames of discord through their propaganda and mutual accusations.

The two sides' contingents to the mixed police and security forces seemto cooperate without coming to blows, but their efficiency leaves something to be desired.

The crime rate has soared in the last two years, sparked by general misery and economic and social stagnation, which the government seems powerless to cope with.

The biggest optimists here say that these problems will be progressively overcome in time, but others are not so sure.

The national reconciliation process is, however, continuing. In the very near future King Sisayang Vatthana is to visit the Pathet-Lao headquarters at Sam Neua in northeast Laos, and other centers of Pathet-Lao-held territories. Some interpret this trip as a political maneuver by the Pathet Lao to win sympathy and improve their position with the general population.

In general, the solution found by Laos to its conflicts seems by far the happiest when compared to South Vietnam or Cambodia.

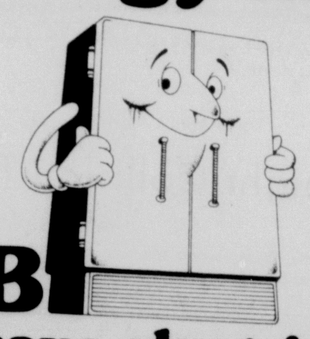
Reducing plan for energy users



Plan B

How to save electricity with refrigerator-freezers

1. Defrost regularly. More than ¼" of frost will act as insulation and causes your refrigerator/freezer to work harder to maintain a proper temperature. Replace worn door gaskets to prevent cold air loss.
2. Keep refrigerator temperature setting between 35° and 40° — freezer setting at 0°. (Use thermometer to check.)
3. Adjust temperature up 2° or 3° if you'll be away several days.
4. Don't leave door open unnecessarily. Close quickly.
5. Avoid overcrowding. It restricts cold air flow around food and overworks unit.
6. Cover all liquids placed in frost-free units. (Moisture causes frost and needless defrosting.)
7. Keep condenser coils on back and bottom of your refrigerator/freezer free of dust for more efficient operation.
8. Cook double recipes and freeze half for future use.

Conserve electricity and you help conserve one or more of the fuels needed to produce it: natural gas, coal and oil. Conserve fuels and you help assure that there will be enough to meet essential needs for electricity in the future.

When you pass a TP&L office, warehouse, generating plant or other facility, you'll see that we've turned off all non-essential lighting. And, in as many other ways as possible, TP&L is reducing its own uses of electricity.

If you would like additional information on conserving electricity, call or see the Customer Service Representative in the TP&L Office.

MOSCOW

"Mirror," the latest film by widely acclaimed Soviet director Andrei Tarkovsky, has gone on limited public showing in Moscow with promises of being at least as controversial as his earlier pictures. Like other films, "Mirror" is a picture of an age. A kind of personal confession, t examines contemporary Soviet history through the director's own contradictory relations with his mother and his wife.

ROME

Italian officials are bewildered by a mysterious jinx on the country's coinage: as soon as it's minted, it disappears. The state mint has been working overtime to end a shortage of small change that has become a major irritation in Italian life. But apparently it has been working to no avail.

NEW YORK

The American way of getting there could undergo a revolution in the New York-New Jersey area--that is if a drastic increase in tolls on bridges and tunnels connecting the two states has its desired effect. The increase--roughly equal to a week's salary per year for an average commuter--is designed to reduce the number of people driving alone to work between the two states.

SYDNEY

The Australian reputation for heavy drinking is under scrutiny as indications grow that tippling is getting out of control. Researchers into alcholism say Australia's hard-drinking tradition is becoming a serious national problem involving increasing numbers at an earlier age. Figures show that Australians last year drank about 364 million gallons of beer and more than 6 million gallons of spirits.

BUENOS AIRES

Leftwing Latin American guerrillas have started manufacturing their own automatic weapons. Raids by Argentine security forces in Buenos Aires recently uncovered two workshops where submarine guns are assembled. Production plans for mortars and bazookas were also found. The fact that leftwing guerrillas are now in a position to make their own combat weapons has added--a new element to the security situation here.

SWITZERLAND

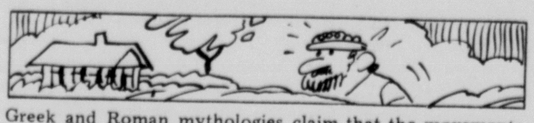
A soggy field here intended for a nuclear plant is becoming a testing ground of Switzerland's vaunted democratic system. In tents and wooden huts, between 100 and 150 people have been camping out each night since April 1 in an effort to halt further work on a $530 million nuclear power station scheduled for completion in about five years.

RIO DE JANERIO

A young gunman is stalking the bleak wastes of Brazil's wild northeast, picking off his enemies with ice cold accuracy and reviving memories of earlier days of Brazilian banditry. Known as the Avenger, Vilmar Glaa, 24, married and father of several children, is already reported to have killed 35 people since he first swore vengeance over the mangled body of his murdered father four years ago.

BELGRADE

Yugoslavia has to work out ways to fight one of the fiercest rates of inflation in the world. This is a tough problem for any government--but even more problematic in a country committed to placing the power to decide prices in the hands of ordinary working people. In Yugoslavia, worker-controlled enterprises decide among themselves the prices they charge



Greek and Roman mythologies claim that the movements of giants imprisoned by Jupiter under high mountains caused earthquakes.

Freshly Cut Flowers Need Proper Care

Flowers that are properly cared for when freshly cut will make longer lasting, attractive arrangements, says Everett Janne, landscape horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

He recommends the following procedures.

"Always use a sharp kinfe or shears tocut the flower stem," says the Texas A&M University Specialist. "A dull cut will crush the stem and plug up the plant tissue. This keeps the stem from carrying water."

Janne stresses using a clean container for the flowers. Used containers should be thoroughly cleaned with a household bleach solution to get rid of any bacteria.

"After the flowers have been cut, put them in warm water and make sure that several inches of the stem is below water," points out Janne.

Remove any leave s that are covered by water.

Then cover the flowers with a plastic film to prevent moisture loss and put them in a refrigerator or cool room for four to six hours.

The flowers are now ready to be put in an arrangement.

"Be sure the stems are covered by about one-fourth inch water and keep the arrangment out of hot or cold ai drafts and away from direct sunlight," advises Janne.

Using chemical commercial preservatives in the water may help keep the flower in good condition. However, be sure to use this according to the manufacturer's recommendation, cautions the horticulturist.

Florida Bass Tested

Are Florida bass harder to catch than their Texas relatives?

Not according to some on-the-spot research done by Nick Carter, chief of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's Inland Fisheries staff.

Recently, Carter and three other s fished a private 10-acre lake in East Texa s which had been experimentally stocked by the department two years ago with Florida and Texas largemouth bass and the hybrid of the two, the so-called "super bass."

The three varieties of bass were stocked at one year of age and since that time the lake has been off limits to fishing as stipulated by a TP&WD contract. The fish were marked by dye injected into the soft tissue of their lower jaw.

"In a full day of fishing using four types of artificial baites," said Carter, "we caught 5 Florida bass, 5 hybrid, 4 Texas, and 42 unmarked fish which the offspring of all three types of fish."

Carter and company each used identical topwaters, spinners, and two colors of plastic worms.

"Of course," said Carter, "this information is inconclusive and the same work will have to be repeated. But in this particular lake at this particular time of the year there seemed to be no difference in the 'catchability' of largemouth bass."

All of the fish were returned to the lake.

Deadline Told For Tax Report

Comptroller Bob Bullock reminded 225,000 retail businesses Friday that April 30 is the deadline for sending in quarterly sales tax reports

"It's just around the corner," Bullock said. "Tardy returns mea n nothing but trouble to both us and the taxpayer."

Reports due April 30 cover the January - March quarter. Forms for the reports were sent to all sales tax permit holders by Bullock's office in March.

Bullock said that most delinquencies "are strictly oversight--but the consequences are the same."

State Has Has Official Travel Mag

AUSTIN

Texa s now has an official state travel magazine.

The Legislature has passed and Governor Dolph Briscoe has signed a resoltuion declaring Texas Highways, a colorful monthly magazine produced by the Texas Highway Department, the official travel magazine of the State of Texas.

In a concurrent resolution passed by both houses, the Legislature said the magazine is a "vital component of the official State of Texas travel development effort."

Considering the unsettled energy situation, the magazine will become a new vehicle to help Texans discover their own state for vacations closer to home.

"The Department's magazine, Texas Highways, beautifully interprets scenic, recreational, historical, cultural, and ethnic treasures of the state and recalls the best of our Texas heritage," the resolution said.

The resolution was cosponsored by Rep. James Kaster of El Paso and Rep. Dave Allred of Wichita Falls. Sen. W. E. (Pete) Snelson of Midland introduced the resolution in the Senate.

The resolution noted that the Highway Department, through its Travel and Information Division, for four decades has conducted a major part of the official state travel development program.

Annual subscriptions to the monthly magazine are $5 and may be ordered by writing: Circulation Office, Texas Highways Magazine, Texas Highway Department, 11 and Brazos St., Austin, TX 78701.

Checks should be made payable to the Texas Highway Department.
